THE VIRGINIA DELYGATION. WASHINGTON, July 2.
President Johnson was visited on yesterday by Messrs. James A. Jones, R. A.
Lancaster, Win. H. Hayall and J. L. Af-

ferson, representatives of the merchants and others of Virginia, who wished him to amend the amnesty proclamation by stri-king out the 13th exception—the $20,000 clause. They represented that this feature interfered with the development of industry by binding capital, and thus oppressed poor, and that when they endeavored to borrow money in the Northern or Middle States, they were at once met by the obction that perhaps they had over $20 000 and if they had, accommodation could not be extended. So they were unable to give work to poor men who called upon them. The President reminded them that the amnesty proclamation did not cause this distrust. It was the commission of treason and the violation of law that did it. The amnesty proclamation left these men just where they were before. It did not add any disability to them. If they had com-mitted treason they were amenable to the confiscation law which Congress had passed and which he as President could not alter nor amend. In the amnesty proclamation he had offered pardon to some persons, but that did not injure any other persons. Would they like to have the amoesty rockmation removed altogathas? Would key feel any easier in that case? One of the defendants: No, but it would sist us much if you would extend the snaits of procuring two persons worth over $20 000.

The President replied that in making that exception he had acted on the natura apposition that the men had aided rebe on according to the extent of their pec know it.

Your State was overwhelmingly opposed to secession, but your rich men used the press, bullies and your little army forced the State into se-cession. Take $20,000; Suppose a man worth more than that now the war is over, and the chances are ten to one that he made it out of rebellion by contracts, to. We might as well talk plainly about this matter. I don't think you are so very anxious about the poor. NEW YORK, July 9. HAMPTON ROADS CONFERENCE. The Herald's correspondence from Richna gives new facts concerning the Hampton Roads Conference. It says one of the rebel commissioners states that on their return from Richmond they refrained from a general discussion of the interview. Judge Campbell affirms he was satisfied with the interview, and felt willing to make peace on the basis of the late President's pltimation. The second day after their arrival in Richmond Mr. Hunter became convinced of the hopelessness of looking or fighting for anything better, and yielded his adher snoe to Judge Campbell's opinion. Stephens thought that a longer delay might be more favorable to the South, but on the evening of his departure for Georgia, which took place on the day before a public meeting at the African Church, he assented substantially to the conclusions of Judge Campbell and Hun-

On one point the Commissioners were fully agreed from the outset. Twoy were opposed to any efforts to influence the public mind to any great extent against the General Government to this end. They waited upon Davis, Benjamin, and other members of the rebel government, and sought to prevent the meeting at the African Church. They used every argument entirely in vain, and themselves positively refused to be present or countenance it in any way. The statement that Stephens had gone to Georgia to canvass his State in favor of prolonging the war, was voluntary and unauthorized. He was applied to by influential men to do so, but positively refused, giving it as his purpose to go home and remain in quietness until the end should come. On his arrival in Georgia he was frequently importuned to take the stump, but so persistently declined that many of his best Southern friends deserted him.

ATZEBOTT'S CONFESSION.

BALTIMORE, July 9. The American has received a special reort of the confession of Atsercts, which was prepared by one who has known him since his arrest. The details of the plot to abduct and murder the President, which are set forth below, were given the anthor by Atzerott but a short time before his death. G. A.
